Let us teach our children:

- To respect all life.
- To preserve the wildlife and thus keep the balance in our ecosystem.
- To see the complex interaction that exists between humans and nature.
- To know that we are all one in the circle of life.

For then they will know why:

- Birds spread their seeds as they fly.
- The telescopic eyes of an eagle can spot a gopher move 2 1/2 miles away.
- A bat or martin eats a thousand insects a day.
- A seven ounce screech owl eats approximately 22 pounds of mice in a year.
- An eagle reaches full size in 45 days by eating mice, one of the highest sources of energy in the food chain.
- A lady bug eats over a thousand aphids each day.
- A horned owl can hear a mouse 200 feet away.
- A Bluebird eats bittersweet seeds during a cold spring while waiting for insects to emerge.
- Squirrels forget where they bury their winter supply, and a tree is planted.
